I WILL NOT MAKE UP

THAT IS WHAT PRETTY KATIE KORNS SAID LAST NIGHT.

'No, sir, I would not make up with him now if he would come back and ask my forgiveness."

That was the answer Miss Katie Korns gave to a question propounded to her by a reporter for the Eagle last night. The Eagle yesterday morning told the story how Ed Christopher, a young man 15 years of age, had promised to marry her and when the ar-rangements were all completed skipped

She said Miss Kittle was out calling on a friend and if the reporter would take a seat in the sitting room she would go out and bring her in. In a few minutes she came in and said: "This is my sister, Miss Khtte Korns." "This is my sister, Miss Kittle Korns," and a rather tall graceful young girl followed her in and seated herself in a rocking chair. Miss Kate said she was II years old but she looked younger. She wore a black dress with white waist and jaunty little black hat perched on her head, a rich growth of auburn halr hung in clusters and curis around her forenead and fell in soft waves over her shoulders. Her complexion was fair and its almost marble whiteness showed in contrast with her lastrous brown eyes.

squirrel does not often throw a whole neighborhood into a panie.

A few days are a lady living on College Hill found a bush-tail squirrel on the screen of the back door. She let the little animal in and gave it some bread. When it had finished its meal it jumped upon the farmiture and began to gnaw it. The hone wife attacked the rascal with a broom. The animal sprang at her and made a vicious light. She finally pushed him out of doors. He ran over to a neighboring house and there bit Bessie Stewart a young girl, on the leg, making a bad wound.

Later in the day J. A. Swineford of College Hill came along and coked what the row was. He laughed when told about the squirrel and went up to pat it. The squirrel and went up to pat it. The squirrel sailed into him, ripping open his shirt from and putting him to flight in a few seconds. Later in the day came along a hunter with a gun and killed the vicious animal.
